

Building Regulation Reform

Construction does not operate in geographic silos and would be best served by uniform and predictable regulation. While we know that the Florida Building Code allows for variation not just by region but by individual municipality, we believe that there are areas where one and consistent standard would be best. This session we will work on establishing one, uniform process, to determine permit fees. Our effort is not to dictate what the fee is, but instead, that everyone use the same equation for establishing their fees.
